A. LECKNER

MR. DONALD RYAN

Dedication

The class of 1961 dedicates this Yearbook to Mr. Donald J. Ryan, in recognition of his achievements and high ideals. He was responsible for founding our school publications, instituting the honor courses, and writing the school song. We remember him as a man distinguished by his respect for the individuality of others, his gentle wit, and his love of challenges and hard work. For all this, we are grateful.

MR. PAUL DENN

PRINCIPAL

TO THE CLASS OF 1961:

I deeply appreciate the opportunity to congratulate the class of 1961 on having merited graduation and on joining the growing ranks of our distinguished alumni. Fittingly, you have selected "decisions" as the theme for your yearbook. This year, we observe the centennial of another year of momentous decision — 1861.

Indeed, every year is in its way a year of decision. Unfortunately, we recognize it as such most frequently only in retrospect. Were the ladies and gentlemen of Charleston, as they idly promenaded the shore observing the bombardment of Fort Sumter like a display of fireworks, aware that our nation was about to embark upon the bloodiest war in its history? Were the twentieth century tyrants aware that their adventures of conquest in Ethiopia and Poland would terminate in Hiroshima and Nagasaki?

As I write this, we too are confronted with problems whose solution calls for decisions — decisions requiring the utmost ingenuity and intelligence of which man is capable. We face today the gravest threat to humanity we have ever faced since man appeared on Earth — the threat of planetary extinction through atomic war. We face too the danger of a population explosion which may ultimately result in world-wide famine and misery. We are threatened, moreover, with the ruinous waste of our natural resources, and of our water supply in particular, a waste which may make water, which is our most precious commodity, the costliest and most scarce. There are many other problems which we face in this day and age, and they are equally perplexing, though probably less cataclysmic.

Perhaps the greatest asset of an educator (as well as his greatest weakness) is his faith in the future. His recurring association with youth and its perennial idealism constantly feeds that faith. And so I have faith that the decisions made by your generation will be wiser than those made by mine. I trust that your association with our school will have helped you in arriving at decisions beneficial to your own personal happiness and to the welfare of all mankind.

Cordially,

Paul Denn

It's Always Time to Decide

"In a minute there is time for a thousand decisions and revisions"
T. S. Eliot

We've made decisions in the past, and must do so in the future. Every one of these decisions will affect other people and will lead to other decisions. We will never be able to say, "There, I've made my last decision; let it end here." Our lives are continuous patterns, with every movement we make affecting another. Frightening, isn't it? For what if some of our decisions do not prove to be entirely satisfactory? Does this mean that they will unalterably harm us?

Of course not! No decision is irrevocable — the "be-all and end-all." The very purpose of a decision is to provide a basis for our behavior, a foundation to build upon, to improve upon, to alter when necessary. While no decision can be undone, it can be redone. If we find we have made a mistake, we attempt to correct it. We thus learn, even from our errors.

Yet, we shouldn't make decisions carelessly, leaning upon the fact that they can be remade if unsatisfactory. We should seriously consider all aspects of the issue, determine the best decision, and then make it, and stand by it. Although no decision is final, it should imply our certainty; only when it is clearly shown that a decision was wrong, should it be abandoned. Once this is done, we should begin anew, always referring to our past decisions to guide us to better ones.

The important thing that we all must remember is that a decision can be changed —just as we can change. Life is not stagnant, and we should not become stagnant. There will always be new experiences to have, greater struggles to enter, more important problems to resolve, and causes to fight for — in short, decisions to make. They may be difficult or easy; they may cause joy or sorrow; we may regret them or look upon them with pride; but we will continue to make them, to grow a little more with each one, to keep striving for a better future. We will always have to decide.

The Real Dimension in Education

There can be no doubt that Van Buren is caught up in the surge and revitalization of American education. The curriculum — with its advanced and college courses, its language labs, its emphasis on technology and scientific training — is a product of the dynamic revival of our educational processes.

Here, in our seminar classes and our discussion groups, we are educating for democracy; here, in our chemistry labs and theoretical math classes, we are educating for National Defense; here, in our G.O. and our student activities, we are educating the complete man.

Yet there is a quality and coherence that is paramount to the whole of the educational process.

The process of education must extend beyond the plane dimensions of the classroom and the lab — it must have a depth of purpose and a height of meaning. We must provide an education that will enlighten and inspire, give insight and perspective — and above all — one which will give body and vitality to the creative mind.

Adlai Stevenson recently stated our educational challenge in this way:

"We have a magnificent tradition. Looking ahead for the long pull — not just missiles and rockets — the American problem in education is to prepare young people to live in an American society caught up in an evolving world community. This means a new dimension for education. It means training innovators, not organization men, in both science and the humanities. It means the understanding of American history and society, not merely as a unique and treasured saga, but as part of a universal experience."

This is far from the emphasis on the rigidity of rote education, or on the technical aspects of science. Our major problem in education is not to develop better guided missiles or to reach the moon before our competitors. It is true that "Russia" is on everyone's mind, but true education is not designed to shape an individual for state needs. This is indeed far from the emphasis upon the false motivation of good grades, or the memorization of "inert subject matter."

Rather, the new direction is toward getting young people to think about the world and their role in it. It is an encouragement to study and explore new worlds, to develop a consciousness and faith in people, in truth, and in human brotherhood.

While it may be true that there is insufficient preparation in science and in mathematics, there is an even greater lack of application in an area which allows for the creative use of imagination and originality.

This concept of the character of the aspiring intellect is strikingly and beautifully expressed in the following passage from Kahlil Gibran's The Prophet:

"(Young people) . . . are the sons and daughters of life's longing for itself. They have their own thoughts. Their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow. Seek not to make them even as you, for life goes not backward, nor tarries with yesterday."

All of us can bring with us into the community of ideas, some new power, some different power — new power to feel, to think, and to act.

This, then, is the real purpose of the whole of the educational complex, the true dimension of education: to develop this inner creativity, this uniqueness, this difference and this power to its most majestic fullness.

OUR CHAMPIONS CHOSE

Shakespeare, Syllogisms, & Slide Rules

Scholastically, 1960-1961 has been a highly successful year for Martin Van Buren. We have had pupils with outstanding averages, and many VeeBees have entered scholarship competitions. These scholarships include awards for academic achievement, scientific achievement, high scholastic potential, and achievement in the industrial and fine arts. We are very proud of our scholars and winners and are happy to pay tribute to them in Futura.

Traditionally, the magic circle of graduates is the so-called "Top Ten." The 1961 "Top Ten" lines up as follows:

First and second are Alice Schaeffer and Jerry Sobel, respectively. They are followed by Bruce Tsuchida, Lucy Agin, Steven Allen, Edward Zachary, Robert Doktor, Richard Aron, Arnold Kleinstein, and Arlene Blackman.

One of the most coveted grants is the National Merit Scholarship, awarded on the basis of scholastic potential and achievement. Steven Allen, Arnold Kleinstein, Carol Kornfield, and Jerry Sobel were chosen semi-finalists on the basis of a Qualifying Test.

The New York State Regents Scholarships are awarded in four categories. This year, Van Buren was among the highest five schools in the City in the number of scholarships won. The winners of General Regents Scholarships were Steven Africk, Lucy Agin, Steven Allen, Richard Aron, Jeffrey Bishop, Robert Bobrow, Susan Boyer, Leslie Comens, Kenneth Deitchman, Martha Diamond, George Dworkin, Elliot Edley, Ronald Eisenberg, Sheila Finkelstein, Kathleen Fitzwilliam, Gordon Goldman, David Greenberg, Stanley Halpert, Lawrence Handelsman, Barbara Harris, Grace Hershberg, Peter Hoffer, Marion Jager, Helen Kaplan, Warren Kleinberg, Arnold Kleinstein, Carol Kornfield, Arthur Lane, Steven Lasky, Howard Levy, Lawrence Lombard, Martin Malawer, Melvin Markowitz, Richard Newman, Janet Oren, Robert Pompei, Elizabeth Porper, Joanne Poucher, Leon Rabinowitz, Alan Raphael, Judith Rosenberg, Alice Schaeffer, Susan Schattner, Stewart Schectman, Mark Scher, Michael Schub, Susan Schwartz, Fredrick Sherman, Roberta Siegal, Lewis Simon, Jerry Sobel, Lawrence Sporty, Allan Stahl, Karen Stern, Martin Sulmeyer, Miriam Tatzel, Gary Tong, Bruce Tsuchida, Arthur Voigt, Warren Wexler, Stephen Wolf, Michael Yanega, Alan Young, Edward Zachary, Harriet Zellner, and Robert Zucker. Awarded scholarships for Mathematics and Science were Steven Africk, Steven Allen, Gordon Goldman, Stanley Halpert, Peter Hoffer, Arnold Kleinstein, Melvin Markowitz, Richard Newman, Robert Pompei, Jerry Sobel, and Bruce Tsuchida. Karen Davis, Carol Galaid, Joanne Poucher, and Susan Schwartz won Nursing Scholarships, and Barbara Harris won a scholarship for children of Deceased or Disabled Veterans.

As a result of the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test, ten seniors were chosen as semi-finalists in the National Honor Society Scholarship Competition. Steven Africk, Richard Aron, Jeffrey Bishop, Robert Bobrow, Arnold Kleinstein, Lawrence Lombard, Melvin Markowitz, Alice Schaeffer, Jerry Sobel, and Edward Zachary then took the General Aptitude Test.

The General Motors Corporation awards scholarships to students with outstanding Scholastic Aptitude Test scores and fine records. Steven Allen and Peter Hoffer received honorable mention in this competition.

Elissa Purnell was a semi-finalist in the Betty Crocker Scholarship competition.

We take this opportunity to wish very successful college careers to all of Van Buren's winners.

Marcia Van Buren Faces Life

Every morning I wake up to my master's voice, which guides me into the bathroom for my morning facial. I met Joan in the cafeteria yesterday. You'd never believe she was a Senior too, she looks so young. As I was leaving for school, I heard my mother being interrogated by a little man who lives inside our TV set: "Does your family have time to brush after every meal?"

"I'm glad I'm wearing my canvas-covered, rubber-soled sneakers," I thought. "I'd never make it otherwise. You see, my program's good—like a social senior's should." I settled down in my first class, Sunrise Semester, and uncapped my under-water, over-water, butter-writing pen. It doesn't write on paper, but it's great for marking up tuna fish sandwiches. I leaned back in my chair; "To sleep or not to sleep" was the question. There was no time to decide, since I was called upon to deliver my speech. I was wearing my prettiest dress. I'd spent hours rehearsing my speech, but the one thing I didn't think of preparing for . . . happened. I was not in the know—I did not use that one puff to put my mind at ease. I wasn't even half-safe! In gym, it was worse; I failed my whiff test!

In Economics I discovered why The Ugy American was so unpopular. He never would remember to nip his blemishes in the bud. I realized that the extra ingredient in this course was money.

During my lab period, I confused the 'a's and 'b's in a glass stomach as they both dissolved—simultaneously. Now I will never be certain if hammering really does cause a headache. I turned my attention to decomposing a coffee-er coffee bean, but somehow I never quite succeeded in finding those flavor cells under the microscope.

My breathing girdle won the Battle of the Bulge in History, but nevertheless a surprise quiz was announced. I looked about, wondering if there was a proctor in the house? I glanced at the girl sitting next to me hunched over her paper. Does she or doesn't she . . . only her test marks tell for sure. Could she be passing her tests, but failing her future?

We have a guard against flying golf balls at our school. The hall patrol acts as an indivisible shield. Please Cross at the End—Not at the Bend.

My day was over at last! I relaxed by dragging deeply on a coffin nail. It took away my breath of spring. Suddenly, I had an unlucky strike. My ex-boyfriend passed with a girl on his arm. I used to go steady with him, I thought miserably. What's wrong with me anyway—even my best friends won't tell me.

I had to face the facts—I was a victim of fatigue build-up. I felt completely exhausted when I finally reached home. I knew what doctors did—but it was too late. My blood didn't care—it was just too tired!

SHARON GLICKMAN

Do You Recall . . . ?

Do you recall
The very first Fall
We spent at Van Buren that year?
'Twas hard that first week
When the pool we did seek
As much as we looked . . . wasn't there!

And do you remember
Hurricane Donna in September
When in front of our school was a lake?
We all made a fuss
As it swallowed our bus
And we hollered—For ol' Glutzman's sake!

But school was quite serious
I'm sure you will find,
If you'll take but a moment
To remember the time . . .

When you had to decide between habit or condition,
Or to choose the word "fusion," (or maybe 'twas "fission");
Spending time on the Regents choosing the right composition—
Decisions, decisions, decisions.

I'm sure you will find
If you search your mind,
A memory or two that will last . . .
Of test answers you'd discover
In code on a book cover
Of detentions long served in the past . . .
Of sneakers and skorts;
Of ponchos and shorts;
Of late bells, green blackboards and gym . . .
Our basketball vic'try
In the winter of '60
When we screamed and we shouted to win.

Our years at Van Buren are over, it's true,
But the memories will linger of ol' Red and Blue.
And the years long gone will serve as a grain
In the Hourglass of Life, as a link in the chain.

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A SWINGIN', SINGIN' SENIOR

ACT 1—THE GREAT AWAKENING

Mother—LET'S GO! LET'S GO! LET'S GO! ALLEY OOP!

S.S.S.—(Swingin', Singin' Senior)—IN THE STILL OF THE NIGHT?

Mother—IT'S NOW OR NEVER.

S.S.S.—OH, DIO MIO! What to wear? Decisions, decisions, decisions! (re-enters wearing ITSIE, BITSIE, TEENY, WEENY, YELLOW POLKA DOT BIKINI).

ACT 2—ON THE ROAD TO M.V.B. Time—6:00 A.M.

S.S.S.—Like, hi FURRY MURRY. Are you ready for our MIDNIGHT STROLL?

Furry—READY, WILLING, AND ABLE. I came prepared with my inflatable gondola, and nothing can SINK THE BISMARCK.

S.S.S.—What's that I hear? (SPLISH SPLASH patters softly in the background.)

Furry—IT'S TOO SOON TO KNOW, but I think it's a hurricane!

S.S.S.—Help! Here comes DONNA, WITH THE WIND AND THE RAIN IN HER HAIR.

Furry—Everybody into the Bismarck!

ACT 3—GYM DANDY

S.S.S.—(panting to friend)—I made it JUST IN TIME!

Friend—We have to go out today. WHY DON'T THEY UNDERSTAND? We're students, not Abominable Snowmen!

S.S.S.—Well, IT'S ALL IN THE GAME.

Friend—Did you see the one last week? Our team is great! How can we miss with TALL PAUL and MACK THE KNIFE?

ACT 4—UBIQUITOUS COMESTIBLE?

S.S.S.—I'm starved!

Friend—Shh! He's calling the tables now.

Teacher—Get ready! Get set! Go! The first four seats of tables 8, 9, and 12 of section A against all the odd-numbered window seats! Now, WALK, DON'T RUN!

S.S.S.—PLEASE MR. CUSTER, LET IT BE ME! (while eating) I learned that this food was terrible MANY, MANY TEARS AGO; I'll never know why I keep buying it.

Friend—Suicidal tendencies.

ACT 5—LITTLE GREY CELLS

Teacher—Today, class, we will study the GREENFIELDS of VENUS.

S.S.S.—That must be a KOOKIE LITTLE PARADISE.

Teacher—Stop calling out or else there will be TROUBLE IN PARADISE. YOU TALK TOO MUCH. But, on to the lesson.

School's out now, and our S.S.S. is lost in the world of dreams. The highlights of his senior year parade before his eyes. He pictures himself as THE MOST HAPPY FELLA. On Senior Day, when KIDS GO APE, teachers wondered: DEVIL OR ANGEL? The Senior Prom, of course, was SOME ENCHANTED EVENING!

Will our S.S.S. REMEMBER his Senior Year? How could he, or you, ever forget it?

JUDITH ROSENZWEIG
CAROL SCHAENMAN

MS found in a crowded corridor

Today in school I wore my T.G.I.F. button. I wore it right over my major letter. "Thank God It's Friday," is what it stands for, and believe me, this button expresses my thoughts exactly. In all my life, I don't think I've ever had a more miserable week. If I weren't so mature, I might even blow up, or go crazy, or something—but luckily I am able to control myself.

Monday night was the beginning of it all. After dinner, I asked Dad if I could have the car. As usual, I had a tough time convincing him that I am a good enough driver to take care of his old rattle-wagon. He used the usual argument, you know how it goes:

"You don't have a driver's license yet, and it's dark out, and you've only been driving for four months, and what if some policemen stop you, and who's got to pay for your bail?" Dad said.

So I said: "Oh, be a sport Dad, Jim's father lets him." This stumped him and so he gave in.

I got home a bit later than I had expected to, and everyone had already gone to bed. Nobody would have awakened either, if I hadn't tripped on the top stair while trying to get to my room.

"Watch where you're going, you clumsy ox," grumbled a sleepy voice. It came from my kid sister's room. That really made me mad! A guy can't even trip without some loud-mouthed brat calling him a clumsy something-or-other. If I have any faults, clumsiness is not one of them. That crack made me so mad, and my stubbed toe hurt so much, that I didn't fall asleep 'til around two o'clock.

The next thing I knew, it was morning and someone was pounding on my door.

"The car won't run," said a rather irate voice. "It won't run because the battery is dead. The battery is dead because the headlights were left on all night, and you are responsible," added the voice. The voice was my father's. "From now on, I refuse to let you take out that car alone," he continued. "You've proven that you aren't old enough to take care of it properly." Then the voice and its owner left. Now, how do you like that? Not old enough my eye. Anybody can make a little mistake once in a while. Sometimes I just don't think that man is reasonable.

The whole thing got me so upset that I put on, without thinking, a shirt that I had bought last year. There must have been a hundred guys who made some crack about that old-styled shirt that day. This, of course, didn't help my mood any, and by the last class of the day, which was English, I was really in a vile temper. That Tuesday was composition day, and I decided to write a biting satire on my fellow students. As a topic I chose: "Conformity, Good or Bad?", and I really tore those smug conformists limb from limb. That made me feel better.

But when I got home, things only got worse. All I did was ask Mom where my history book was, and would she please refrain from cleaning up my room and hiding everything in drawers and closets. Then she blew up and gave me a long spiel about how sloppy I was, and how I was always asking her to do things for me, and how I thought I was independent, but was really nothing of the kind. Can you imagine that? Me, one of the best dressers in the school, she accused me of being sloppy! Not only that, but dependent too. Just because they feed you, clothe you, chauffeur you, and give you an allowance, parents think they're indispensable.

Wednesday wasn't bad, but Thursday was terrible. Let me begin from the beginning. If you're a senior like me, you know what it's like to have to sweat and save for senior expenses. Of course I'm going to the prom, and probably to a night club afterwards. Now this, of course, will entail a lot of money; and, since my parents refuse to pay for these expenses, I've been trying to save a little bit at a time. For me, this is nearly impossible, since I usually have to borrow money from somebody or other by the end of each week. Anyway, by yesterday morning I had saved up a grand total of thirty bucks. Thirty bucks! A fortune! And by yesterday afternoon I had saved up two dollars. What happened? I'll tell you what happened, I knocked over a whole shelf full of beakers and graduates and test tubes and God knows what else in the chem lab. I have service there the eighth period, and all I was trying to do was put things where they belonged. The floor is hard, the glass wasn't quite as hard, and, quite naturally, everything broke into nice little pieces. Not only did they make me pay for it, but I had to sweep up the broken bits as well! I never realized how expensive glass is. Goodbye twenty-eight dollars!

And now it's Friday, and everything went wrong. I had charred eggs for breakfast, missed the bus, slammed my locker door on my finger and bent my senior ring in the process, failed a French quiz with a zero, criticized the piece my music teacher played and found out it was Beethoven's Fifth, ripped a fingernail yanking a pair of gym shorts from somebody's basket, and smashed my nose against one of those swinging doors because I couldn't see through my dark glasses.

A week such as this one might have had a bad effect on a lesser person than I. Some, as I have said before, might have even gone crazy. As it is, I find myself a bit more nervous now than last week. Nervous! True! Nervous—very dreadfully nervous. But certainly no more. Surely no one will say that I am more. Mad am I not! No, nervous only. Nervous! Nervous! Even agitated, but how so more than this? How will you say that I am mad? How can I be mad when I am writing this in a perfectly sane manner? I am not mad, no, not at all! Not in the least! Not in any way! Just nervous...

BRUCE TSUCHIDA

It's Greek To Me

When I came to Van Buren, I didn't exactly plan to take five languages. I really didn't. At the prep school I went to during my freshman year, I only took one foreign language—French. Very big deal. You take French and everybody's supposed to think you're a genius and all.

If you really want to hear about it, French really killed me. I mean it. If there ever was a language that depressed me, that was it. My roommate at prep school especially depressed me with French. Just because he was in his third year of French, he thought he was a hero and a prince and all. He kept saying snotty things about them, my new pants, for instance. He kept saying they were new and bourgeois. That was his favorite crummy word: bourgeois. Everything I had was completely bourgeois. Even my blue tie was bourgeois. He borrowed it off me all the time, but it was still bourgeois, anyway. Everybody who took French except me became a big phony intellectual. And I can't stand phonies. So when I moved to Queens, I decided not to take it anymore.

My first home room at Van Buren was number 3L-339, or something like that. I could never remember numbers like that. I have to admit it. I was given biology, geometry, English, world history, health ed., and Spanish. Spanish wasn't so bad. I always wanted to sort of like speak a little Spanish because I always saw those phony heroes in the cowboy pictures save the lives of hundreds of settlers just because they knew a few words in Spanish to talk off the desperadoes and all. And in the movies, you always see some guy like John Wayne pronounce Rio Grande, making the "Grande" part rhyme with "candy." Anyhow my favorite T.V. program was "Zorro" and you could always hear the fat captain Garcia yell some Spanish at the poor corporal. Also when Zorro would give this gorgeous, big-eyed dame a snow job, I really itched to find out what all those suave words meant. I really did.

So I studied the rotten tenses, the painful Hispanic geography, the tricky accent marks and also those sleazy little crooked lines over the n's. Then it happened. I once knew, that is my aunt once knew, some American family that lived over there in Puerto Rico. It so happens that at birth, the daughter had the fantastic luck of being betrothed to me in marriage. (Obviously an old family custom.) They were in New York one time, and my aunt decided we were going to visit them. We did. The girl was thirteen, and a very nice thirteen. Well, before I would make the big decision and all, I thought I had better talk to her a little (after all, people don't decide to take a big step like marriage in a second, do they?). So I began talking to her, in English, but I was interrupted every two seconds by my aunt, who didn't exactly believe that I could use the Spanish they taught me in school at all. Ha! "Come on, say something to them in Spanish." Well, after a while this could get on your nerves, so I asked the girl's father a simple question in my simple Spanish, which was pretty simple. "Que lleva Ud?" I said, trying to sound as Hispano-American as I could. This was obviously the wrong question, since the girl's face turned more red than even Fidel Castro and the mother grunted under her breath like she was insulted and all, as if she had anyhing to be insulted about. The father was at first taken aback, but soon gathered his composure and answered me by saying that he was wearing a white shirt and a blue tie made from silk. Very interesting. I realized the question wasn't so good, since everyone sat there looking real bored. Well the girl's mother kept telling the poor girl to say something to me in Spanish, but she was obviously bashful to speak to me because she thought that with my hot-shot New York City suburban high school language education I would laugh at her speedy but un-grammatical-minded speaking. I wouldn't. I really wouldn't. So we all spoke to each other (in English) the rest of the night and sat around looking like real phonies and then said our goodbyes. It sounds terrible to say but I made up my mind to shop around for a better subject to spend my time on.

In case you don't know, when I returned to Van Buren, Spanish became a royal pain, and, since I was slightly interested in math and the physical sciences, I decided to go into German 1 in the fall term. Besides, I heard that Elvis Presley was having a real good time over there in Bonn because he spoke the language and all; a little, anyhow. German was O.K. until I came up against a sentence that ended in a series of six infinitives! It really did. When I think about it I really get excited. Also, they had big long words for simple little things like one of those little brass jobs that are on apartment house doors that let you see the guy outside who's knocking, if he's a robber and all. That little hole with the glass in it they called "innergerlooken-peeper."

While I was working at the language lab one day (then an experimental federal project), I was reading a copy of Caesar's Gallic Wars in translation and right then and there decided I ought to take Latin. I couldn't though. It turned out that since I had already taken four languages, and didn't like any of them, that I probably wouldn't like Latin, either.

That depressed me. But now it's O.K. One thing bothers me though, and that's that there is a new course in Russian given here at college now. It would be interesting if when I watch the news on television and some bald, pudgy Russian takes off his shoe and bangs on his U.N. desk, and yells, and all that, that I would know what he's saying.

After all, maybe I should consider taking Russian. And have you heard about the new course given here, "Greek for Beginners"? . . .

The Final Hour

A Legend Of The Graduates

Introduction

This is a story, a legend, a fable,
A bit of moonshine with no basis in fact,
A soothsaying, moon-baying poke at tradition,
A dream of when Seniors will counter-attack.

This is a record of the coup d'etat.
This is a statement of succession of power.
This is a dictum of that which is not.
This is an epilogue to the Final Hour.

In the first minute of the Final Hour, all review books were burned in a blazing pyre in front of the school, as ultimate affirmation by the Seniors of Epicurus as their leader.

In the fifth minute of the Final Hour, a reckless band of Seniors, wearing Cherokee war bonnets, broke into the teachers' lunchroom and forced those present to go up in sections.

In the tenth minute of the Final Hour, the first official football game was played on the athletic field, between Senior boys who sank beneath the ground and disappeared before anyone could save them.

In the fifteenth minute of the Final Hour, an emergency High Tribunal was formed by Seniors to try teachers accused of smoking on school premises.

In the twentieth minute of the Final Hour, the passing mark on Regents Examinations was lowered to 35%. Those who received above 65% were compelled to turn in their Submarine Race Watching Cards.

In the twenty-fifth minute of the Final Hour, all pink slips became redeemable in Fig Newtons.

In the thirtieth minute of the Final Hour, John F. Kennedy officially replaced Elvis Presley and Clark Gable (who unfortunately had to be replaced) in the hearts of teenage girls, throughout America.

In the thirty-fifth minute of the Final Hour, Mrs. Weidenbaum was sent home with strict orders to change into a longer skirt.

In the fortieth minute of the Final Hour, wild cries resounded through the school. Upon investigation, it was discovered that the Cherokee Indians had reappeared, and were in the process of beating up the school cooks with live tunas.

In the forty-fifth minute of the Final Hour, a leaflet entitled Behind Closed Doors, was distributed to the students, free of charge. It dealt with the activities taking place in the teachers' lounges.

In the fiftieth minute of the Final Hour, all small lockers grew up to normal size.

In the fifty-fifth minute of the Final Hour, Girls' League and Boys' League united in a rapturous revelation of things to come.

In the sixtieth minute of the Final Hour, the Seniors turned all the clocks back.

ACTIVITIES

Beehive of Activity

Since 1955, when Martin Van Buren High School was completed, our school has earned an outstanding reputation both scholastically and athletically. We honor those students who have attained high scholarship, and shower deserving praise on our wonderful athletes. However, there are many students who have played a large role in creating the Van Buren of 1961, but have received little acknowledgment for their efforts. We feel that these Van Burenites who have worked each day as teachers' aides and have participated in the organizations and activities of our school, certainly merit the appreciation of their fellow students. This article, then, is dedicated to the recognition of those students who have made Martin Van Buren High School a 'beehive of activity.'

Some of the busiest V-bees are the members of the honor societies of our school. The different species may be easily distinguished by their varied insignias. Those of the red and blue Theta letter are Arista bees who really do need wings to fly through their many activities. These have ranged from a UNICEF fund-raising drive to a newly instituted tutoring program. A select group of Arista represents Van Buren in the National Honor Society. Not to be outdone, the commercial bees have their own hive. They may be seen flitting to the Commercial Honor Society every week, wearing their blue insignias.

The honey from our journalistic bees is displayed in our many school publications. Everyone knows what's buzzing by reading the school publications. In Van Buren, all bees read the Bee Line. Currents takes the nectar of the literary and artistic achievements of the student body to create its annual magazine. The scientific and mathematical bees combine their talents in publishing Horizons. Project E presents a yearly offering of topics covering the vast field of the social studies. The staff of Futura works to make a Yearbook which is a living memory of our years at Van Buren.

The worker bees keep the hive running by offering their time and service to the school and the community. The brother and sister organizations, Boys' League and Girls' League, can easily be spotted at such events as Open School Week and while proctoring tests, by their red and white uniforms. Their greatest rivals, Leaders, who can be seen every day roughing it in the gym, prefer to wear blue and white. The Ushers direct the swarms of V-Bees to and from the auditorium, while the boys on the Audio Video Instruction Squad set up the necessary equipment. Our community reaps the benefits of the efforts of the Turkey Mountain and Jr. Red Cross Clubs.

V-bees with special interests have joined together to share their ideas. Those with an eye to the future meet at the Future Teachers' Club and the Future Nurses of America to discuss their planned vocations. The Catholic, Jewish and Protestant faiths are represented by the Newman, Menorah and Trinity Clubs, whose purpose is to increase the understanding of the meaning, customs and traditions of the respective religions. At the Spoken Word and Poetry Clubs, those who are interested in drama and poetry find a congenial atmosphere.

Talent galore abounds in the beehives of Van Buren. V-bees with an interest in Graphic arts have the opportunity to improve their ability at the Ben Franklin Club while serving the school. The copy of the program of the Senior Show, which is probably now in your scrapbook, is only one example of their excellent work. For the skilled and the beginner there is the challenge of the Bridge and Chess clubs. Future housewives can gain valuable experience in the art of managing the home in the Home Economics Club. That cherished memory of our victory at Madison Square Garden has been preserved for you by the sharp shooting members of the Photo Squad.

Our music and dramatic departments are honeycombed with talent. At the conclusion of each assembly program, the members of the band are always ready to provide a background for our enthusiastic singing of the school song. The V-Beats, our marvelous dance band, have helped to make our school dances a success. Our traditional Christmas Program is always climaxed by the singing of the "Hallelujah Chorus" by the Operetta Workshop, Choir and Girls' Chorus, whose combined efforts are needed in order to be heard over the powerful Orchestral accompaniment. All of these fine music groups work together to produce our annual Spring Concert. The Drama Club, Dramatic Workshop and Production groups provide an outlet for those who enjoy acting, and prepare entertaining programs for those who prefer watching.

In this age of technology, our math and science departments are inclined to agree that honey is not the best food for thought. For example, the Math Team thrives on figures and reports that this has brought them much success in dealing with their problems. The members of the Math Help Club come to the aid of those of us who can't help feeling a twinge of regret that we are no longer living in the Dark Age. The Math Club of the Air is a group which gathers to watch and discuss together the television program of the same name. For those who prefer disecting to bisecting, the Biology Club provides a generous supply of frogs as well as varied opportunities for scientific research.

Our V-bees are international in outlook. The French, Spanish and German Clubs offer enrichment to students studying these languages. In addition, the baby bee of our school is the Russian Club, which was born this year as a result of the increasing importance of this language in the world. Another group which is interested in learning about faraway places is the newly formed History Honor Society. This organization and the Great Issues Seminar bring together the many students who display high achievement and aptitude in the field of social studies.

The queen bees of Van Buren are the Cheerleaders. Along with the Twirlers and Boosters, they have helped to create an enthusiastic school spirit which has been an important factor in our many basketball victories.

All of our busy V-bees deserve to be proud of themselves. They are the ones who have formed the traditions which have made Martin Van Buren High School one of the finest in the nation and have sent it soaring into an orbit of perpetual success.

OUR HEROES CHOSE

Rebounds, Rackets, & Races

Just take a look at the trophy case in the lobby, and see for yourself—for in the first five short years of our school's existence, athletically inclined VB's, under the leadership of Van Buren's competent coaches, have brought pride and honor to our school by winning coveted awards and trophies in nearly every sport.

At the thrilling basketball games at Madison Square Garden in Spring, 1960, most of us witnessed "Shannon's Midgets" out-play and out-jump the Chamberlains of Haraan and Jefferson High Schools. We can remember the Cheerleaders who screamed in terror when it looked as though Richie Stopa had been hurt in racing for possession of the ball, and how we all screamed when we realized that sixteen inches of snow had accumulated outside.

This year's highlight in athletics occurred when our Cagers appeared on T.V. for an exciting contest against Forest Hills High School. Remember how we felt deep down, as we watched Mike Witt, Steve Schissler and Bob Morrise play so well that they couldn't lose? Well, they only lost by . . . I mean, they almost won. The girls exhibited their athletic prowess that day when our Leaders expertly demonstrated their gymnastic dexterity by doing stunts that even our hardier men couldn't watch.

Michael Gass, captain of the track and cross-country teams, has displayed an outstanding record in sports this year, as a winner of three medals in his field. This year's Keglers, coached by Mr. Radwin, have finished third in the PSAL Third Division Bowling Tournament, with Al Mercatante and Bill Reilly scoring over two hundred apiece. The tennis team finished second in the PSAL Fall Tennis Tournament.

Also rallying their teams on the road to glory were the following outstanding players:

Baseball . . . . . Al Goldstein, Dennis Lanzberg, Billy Gardner
Basketball . . . . . Steve Schissler (Capt.), Mike Witt
Riflery . . . . . Barry Seidman, Richard Ritayik, Bill Egar (Capt.)
Track . . . . . John Mitsopoulos, Cliff Barnett, Ramon Pollack, Gordon Tsou
Cross Country . . . . . Michael Gass
Bowling . . . . . Al Mercatante, Bill Reilly, Vincent Jackson, Ken Deitchman
Soccer . . . . . Eddie Mandel
Tennis . . . . . Steve Klein, Richie Newman
Handball . . . . . Eddie Taylor
Golf . . . . . Harvey Grill
Fencing . . . . . Lawrence Lombard

The girls, too, have demonstrated remarkable ability in the school's athletic clubs. The following seniors have proved to be unusually excellent.

Speedball . . . . . Fran Heinrich
Softball . . . . . Maxine Spritzer
Bowling . . . . . Gail Bohrer
Stunts and Tumbling . . . . . Roberta Sands
Volleyball . . . . . Johann Poissant

Under the guidance of Miss Wigiser, faculty adviser, and Roberta Sands, president, Van Buren's Leaders have continued to be athletically outstanding, as shown at the numerous playdays and demonstrations. The bowling playday for the handicapped of Van Buren and other high schools, originally sponsored by Leaders, has now become an annual event. This year Johann Poissant, Gail Bohrer and Iris Bohrer have won bowling trophies.

There is one suggestion we would like to leave the school to boost the morale and to sense the athletic energy of Van Buren's ordinary man in the gym: we recommend installing huge glass panels, instead of those accursed electric doors that separate the girls' gym from the boys'. With this thought, Van Buren, Farewell.

Looking Ahead

"Look at all those people," I said to my dance partner. Each was dancing or standing around talking or guffawing at unsubtle phrases.

"At this moment each is as unconcerned with the future as a drunk with a hangover, or a dead-tired Peter Tripp type. To them is a limited variety of emotions, a limited variety of experiences, an unlimited capacity for asininities. My faux pas arises from wasting my time discussing these bores, inconsequential beings, who spend their time pursuing a horizon of surprisingly little expansiveness. I laugh and cry at the same time, and am beseiged with doubts as to which emotion is deserving of precedence. I finally decide to say nothing, do nothing, and think of all the inappropriate things to say that are continually popping into my mind."

My partner, sympathetic to the cause, flashed me a look of encouragement; but I, too overcome by a feeling of defeat, impotence, defeat-defeat-defeat, responded with a slight wiggle of my ear which led me to further experimentation with that remarkable talent of mine.

On my mind had been the worries of generations, the weight of a thousand must-be-made decisions, the threat of a million consequences if a million questions were not answered conclusively and irrefutably for all time, now! Imagine my chagrin at finding my mind much too tired, singularly unoriginal, unplunging, reaching no conclusions, then not-caring; then worrying about the not-caring; then the nagging worries from doubting, dreaming dreams no mortal ever dared to dream before, and the darkness gave no token . . .

A delightfully provocative voice floated from the center of the dance floor—I was recalled from my reverie. The renewed rhythms of new music beat against my eardrums. I advanced and was greeted by a charming, appropriately shy smile which dimmed the gas-lamps of depression and fired the charred flambeau of hope.
